"The Effect of Continuing NHS Changes on Isle of Wight Public Health

Further major changes to Strategic Health Authorities and PCTs in England will entail new challenges for public health on the Isle of Wight. A brief account of what is transpiring will draw out opportunities for adopting a multi-disciplinary approach.

Paul Bingham is the Director of Public Health for the Isle of Wight and also, under a service level agreement, a Consultant in Communicable Disease Control with the Health Protection Agency. Paul is married with 3 children. He has a number of interests including the petrology of meteorites.
